URBAN PLATFORM DANUBE REGION

The Danube river has the greatest number of bordering countries worldwide, but also the largest concentration of cities and metropolitan areas, which gives the Danube Region potential for becoming one of the most dynamic, competitive and thriving regions of the European Union in the 21st century.

Although the importance of the integration of regional and local administrations, cities and civil society in the implementation of the strategy is generally recognized at all levels as being crucial to the Strategy's success, the practical involvement of these organisational levels and institutions still has to gather momentum.

Therefore, one of the main aims of PA-10 is the setting up of an "Urban Platform Danube Region", uniting as many Cities, City-Networks and associations in the Danube region as possible in order to enhance their ownership in the EUSDR, at the same time strengthening their leadership role in the region and the strategy. The Platform does not want to replace many existing networks, but to complement them with a regional aspect, as well as the possibility of an open information and exchange process.
